About COVID-19 Matters

Clayman Rosenberg Kirshner & Linder LLP has a multidisciplinary group helping clients navigate the fluctuating legal and regulatory landscape arising out of the COVID-19 pandemic. Our team brings to bear its experience across a broad range of practices that intersect with the most critical topics in this unprecedented crisis. We are helping clients navigate employment and insurance issues; defending clients involving investigations into procurement fraud, small business administration (SBA) fraud, health care fraud, price-gouging, and false claims act matters; and preparing clients through anticipating future challenges and opportunities arising out of the pandemic.

Representative Matters

- Obtained compassionate release from federal prison for client serving a year-long prison sentence for tax evasion who was at high-risk of developing serious complications if he contracted COVID-19 while imprisoned.
- Advising insurance companies and providing coverage determinations for business interruption claims arising from Covid-19 shutdowns.
- Assisting employers and employees in navigating the new laws and regulations enacted in response to COVID-19, including those regarding state and federal leave.
