About Employment Contracts

Individuals presented with agreements governing the terms and conditions of their employment should retain experienced employment counsel to ensure that such agreements are fair and equitable, consistent with industry standards, not overly oppressive and legal. We maximize and protect an employee's benefits during and long after their term of employment. Our attorneys have extensive experience in negotiating employment documents, such as employment agreements, bonus and commission plans, equity agreements, non-compete and non-solicit provisions and confidentiality and non-disclosure agreements. We also assist employees in navigating between jobs and avoiding potential legal issues associated with post-employment restrictions. We frequently represent high-ranking and C-level employees, officers, partners and executives in negotiations regarding their compensation, equity and other significant terms and conditions of their employment.
